

HIGH SCHOOL

VERSUS

COLLEGE

Teachers remind students of missing assignments.

Teachers do not remind students of upcoming due dates or missing work.

Teachers often write information on the board as a summary of notes.

Professors may lecture nonstop, expecting students to take notes on what they identify are important points.

Teachers are often available for conversation before, during, or after class to answer student questions.

If students have questions, professors expect and want the student to attend their scheduled office hours.
